BIG FAIR BOOSTERS

GET WARM WELCOME ON TRIP TO AVALON

People Crowd Village to Hear Band. Vocal Program and Local Men Speak. Rural Ladies' Association. Janesville Fair and Home Coming Week automobile boosters received an enthusiastic greeting at Avalon last night. The first run of a big fairer planned by the fair board to advertise the two big Janesville attractions of the week after next. Fully a thousand townspeople and farmers from the surrounding country crowded the main street of the village to hear the booster band, the quartet and the addresses of the Janesville men.

The Janesville Military band made the trip with the twenty-five automobiles that composed the party and gave a very commendable concert. The Lakota club quartet's numbers pleased and they were forced to give encore after encore.

C. E. More, a member of the fair board, presided as chairman of the evening. Dr. W. A. Munz, president of the organization, also spoke at the fair. H. A. Molenpahl, the Clinton banker.

Literature advertising the fair and home coming was distributed in the village during the evening. A big itinerary has been worked up by the fair board and that they urgently request the presence of every machine owner in the city who can possibly go on the trips should do so.

The next run will be held on Tuesday night. This will be to Fairfield, in co-operation with the board of the Fairfield Ladies Industrial association, a church organization, will hold an ice cream social. The band, a quartet and speakers will appear here similar to at Avalon last night.

In addition Robert S. Dalley, who is making such a hit hereabouts with his solos to band accompaniment will be in the booster party and will also be on the program. Mr. O. Mount will be the principal speaker of the evening. Notice of further arrangements as to place of meeting and time of start are to be arranged for Monday.

TORRID DAYS KEEP ICE COMPANIES BUSY

Demand for Ice Reaches High Mark—One Ice Cream Company Tires Its Output.

The ice man is a popular fellow these hot days. There are many housewives who anxiously await his arrival each morning, fearful that the chunk which may have survived the night will not be the one to come before he can come to the rescue. It is no snap hustling huge cakes of ice on a hot day, either, according to men who do it, and if those who think it is a snap should try the hands at it they might find it entirely different from what they imagined.

At any rate the local ice companies are kept busy early and late supplying the demand of the customers. It is one big rush from early morning to late afternoon in order to serve everyone. Efforts are being made to increase the forces. There is no danger of a shortage, however, according to information given out today.

The demand for ice cream is reported to be unprecedented during the last few days. The Sheriff's company it is estimated that the daily output amounts to two thousand gallons, or almost triple the amount of ordinary times. The majority of this is shipped to surrounding towns, although the amount consumed in Janesville is astounding.

The band Monday of the last evening at Court House Park—Classy Program Pleases.

What was without a doubt the largest crowd that has attended a concert in Janesville during the present season was at the Court House Park last night to hear the Bower City Band and the Sheriff's company.

The band Monday of the last evening at Court House Park—Classy Program Pleases. The park was crowded from Main street to the county building, hundreds sitting on the grass to listen to the music while fully as many more strolled about, jamming the sidewalks from edge to edge. The number of automobiles parked in the vicinity was also much larger than on former occasions.

The band presented a program of snappy music, the rendition of all numbers of which was excellent. Robert S. Daley sang "Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You" and was cheered to answer to an encore. Mr. Daley's singing is taking extraordinary with Janesville enthusiasts of band accompaniment solo work and others, and he gets a big greeting at every appearance.

SEEK TOBACCO PLANT TO RESIST ROOT ROT

Experiments by State Aggie Station Conducted Near Edgerton to Develop Strain.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Edgerton, Wis., July 29.—Experiments have been made near here by the state agricultural experiment station to develop a strain of tobacco which will resist the root rot, the most serious disease with which the tobacco grower has to contend. The average yearly loss in Wisconsin alone is placed at $1,000,000. The disease attacks the roots of the plant, causing them to decay. The plants then wither and die. The cause of their inability to procure sufficient food from the soil through the roots. According to experts, the only two ways in which the disease can be controlled is by planting disease resisting strains or by taking care that only healthy plants are placed in healthy soil.

Just north of the agricultural experiment station has been selected a place where the disease is not so prevalent. It is here that the state is developing a strain of tobacco which will resist the root rot. The plants are being grown in a field which is believed to be "worm out."

Land upon which tobacco has been grown contains more or less disease which might affect healthy plants, according to Mr. Johnson. A new soil will not be infected.

Test for Death.

A drop of ether injected into the eyeball is recommended by an Italian physician as the most reliable test of death. If life is still present the ether will cause a reddening of the eye, but if death has taken place there will be no change. The mirror test is frequently used for this purpose.

RIVER LAUNCH BURNED IN MYSTERIOUS BLAZE

Boathouse and Craft of E. L. Badger Destroyed Last Night, With Several Hundred Dollars Loss. A fire of mysterious origin destroyed the launch of Edmund L. Badger, 1021 N. Washington street, just below the old Chautauque grounds, on the river, shortly before 10 o'clock last night. Damages will total several hundred dollars. An alarm sounded from box No. 131, gave the fire horses a long run, but the long distance of the fire from the nearest pump and the boathouse being almost totally destroyed when the apparatus arrived, it was deemed inadvisable to stretch fifteen or eighteen hundred feet of hose. No one is able to account for the flames. This was the second run to this vicinity for the department Friday. A grass fire, set by sparks from a Northwestern railway locomotive, called the department out during the afternoon. Hand pumps were employed to quench this fire.

BARN, HAY, UTENSILS BURN ON PAUL FARM

Great Structure and Valuable Contents Total Loss in Fire During Middle Afternoon. A second fire of mysterious origin within the period of twenty-four hours since 10 o'clock last night, but thought to have been the result of spontaneous combustion, caused a loss of several thousand dollars from the farm of Edward H. Paul on Eastern avenue near the beet sugar plant. A great show, and several hundred dollars worth of farm machinery were consumed by the flames. The fire was discovered about 2:15 o'clock when great clouds of smoke were noticed issuing from the roof of the structure. A still alarm by telephone brought the fire apparatus to the scene. Long leads of hose were necessary to get within fighting distance. Members of the Paul family are at loss as to the cause of the fire, but the general supposition is that it was due to chemical action of the hay produced through the excessive heat.

Objected to Common Term.

"Billingsgate" is an accepted term for vituperative language. A speaker in a political club wished to vary this expression in chiding an opponent, and criticized him for using "fishmarket language." Thereupon an other member rose and protested against this phrase. "I have been a fish dealer for thirty years," he said, "and have never heard any bad language used in my business. The fish business is a respectable one, and should not be the subject of a slur."

AGED CLINTON MAN SUCCUMBS FRIDAY

Cornelius M. Treat, Aged 99 Years, One of Oldest Members of Masonic Order, Passes Away.

Clinton, July 29.—Hon. Cornelius Mortimer Treat, aged 99 years, one of the oldest members of the Masonic order in Wisconsin, passed away at his home in this city on Friday.

Mr. Treat was born April 25, 1817, in the town of Angelica, Allegany county, New York. He was a small child when his father died, and he was reared by his mother's efforts. He was a highly educated man and later became a highly educated man.

At nineteen years of age he moved to New London, Ohio, where he began teaching school. He was married in New London to Phoebe Alvira Clinton on August 29, 1841. In 1840 he cast his first vote for Martin Van Buren.

In the spring of 1847 Mr. Treat came to Clinton, Wis., and for a brief period spent in Janesville and four years as proprietor of the American Hotel at Belvidere, Ill. He has since resided in this city for the last eighteen years and was a town superintendent for eight years, and Rock county school superintendent for a single year.

In 1862 he was elected to the Wisconsin legislature where he served with ability and integrity. It was in 1862 that he joined the Masonic order, in which he was a Master Mason for fifteen years, and one of the best posted Masons in Wisconsin. He was a member of the Knights Templar lodge of Beloit and a member of the grand lodge of Wisconsin, having been elected to the first time in 1864, and annually thereafter until he was unable to travel.

Mr. Treat was rich in friends. He was a brotherly nature, was upright in character and was a true patriot. His memory was unimpaired despite his advanced years and he was able to recite forty chapters of the Bible, including the whole of the book of Isaiah.

Mr. Treat had two children: Emily D. Treat, now deceased, and Curtis M. Treat of Chicago. He leaves the following grandchildren: Allen Gates, Clinton; Clayton Gates, Clinton; Volney C. Gates, Greeley, Colo.; Leona Schaeffer, and Lillian Treat of Chicago. He also leaves two great grandchildren.

WORE NO GOGGLES EYE GONE FOREVER

Madison, Wis., July 29.—Goggles to protect the eyes of men working on grinding metals probably will be furnished hereafter by the Bloomer Machine Works, Bloomer; also other workmen themselves will understand the use of goggles is not only desirable but necessary. That is, they will use them if they can comprehend the truth that if two eyes are better than one.

For a matter of three years the Wisconsin Industrial commission has been teaching the gospel of goggles for grinders and for laborers on grinders by word of mouth, through printed bulletins, two-color posters and personal lectures. Also it has preached the gospel of goggles by the use of a workman, telling them that they ought to wear goggles when they work on emery or other grinding machines. About two years ago, when some employers and some workmen still refused to wear goggles, the commission adopted an order. This order required employers to furnish goggles to workmen employed on grinding machines, on the commission's recommendation, added a phrase to the commission act. This phrase lays out the employer 15 per cent on an employer whose employee is injured through failure of the employer to furnish goggles or goggles in compliance with the commission order. If the employer fails to use the guard or goggles, he is injured, he sacrifices 15 per cent of his compensation.

The Bloomer Machine works didn't furnish goggles for its men. Harry Erickson therefore worked at grinding without goggles because his employer didn't furnish them. Suddenly he got a stinging and a blinding of one eye. He went to doctor. A fragment of steel was lodged in the eyeball. The eye got worse. Specialists were called in, but the eye got no better. The eye was blind. Eventually Erickson's sight came back. One eye was useless; and all because the employer didn't furnish a pair of goggles. At the hearing of Erickson's case, the commission decided that the employer didn't furnish a pair of goggles. The commission's award grants $904, which includes 15 per cent penalty on the employer. But Erickson's eye is gone. The goggles probably will be used by grinders at Bloomer.

CRISIS NOW HAS SHIFTED TO TEUTONS

almost barefoot, the Turks, excepting at Kut-el-Amara, were everywhere defeated, and the wastage of the long and bitter struggle to take Dvinik had weakened von Hindenburg so that he was incapable of undertaking a general offensive on the Russian front. The Austrians, left to themselves, had been in a state of collapse since the large force before Salonika was required to hold Serbia and prevent the invasion of Bulgaria. The interior situation of Germany was officially admitted to be critical.

Peace for Central Powers. In this embarrassment, as the French observers view it, the central powers are finding it difficult to keep their heads above water. They are urgently needing the aid of the spirits of the German people, depressed as they were by prolonged privations, looked to the French front and decided upon the adventure of Verdun.

The German plan seems originally to have been to concentrate artillery, munitions and men in such force over Verdun as to break through the French line, and then to move on to the east, where they would be able to choose Verdun because the position of the ancient fortress was such that the defenders had their backs to the river. Success there would have meant a possible prestige with neutral powers and the maximum comfort to their own people. It was also possible they knew well the subsequent political events in France disclosed—that the defense of Verdun were not, in view of the vast tactics of this war, as strong as their parts of the front. It is the belief of military experts that the German plan was to break through the front there and destroy the French armies. It was imperative that success be rapid according to this view, and when after three days the advance was checked in the region of Douaumont, the project had failed. General Petain, as an official citation later revealed, had time to re-establish a delicate situation. This was no longer hope of breaking through the French front.

Gains Cost Heavily. Every yard of ground gained by the Germans before Verdun since February 24 has been at an extremely heavy sanguinary cost. The continuous and expensive and fruitless operation has puzzled the world. It has been advanced that the Germans persisted in the object of exhausting the French forces and preventing an advance by the allies elsewhere. If that was the case, the success of the allies in the battle of the Somme show it was not attained.

The battle of Verdun, if ordered with the intention of interfering with the offensive plan of the allies, was a waste of the chances of carrying them out, whatever the fate now be. The discarded fortress, it having now no more significant part from the prestige of the name, but any other point along the front. Local success there has long been discounted in military opinion can have no vital effect on the general situation of a wastage process by the central powers at this stage of the war is held to be illusory and certainly enormously costly. The central empires have no longer resources in such numbers that they can afford to launch them against the allies in the mere hope of inflicting more damage than they suffer.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

"You can't make photo plays as you make shoes. The yard-stick and so-called efficiency engineer constitute the greatest menace to the artistic development of the motion picture."

Albert Capellani, director general of the new film corporation, has this to say of the motion picture industry in general. He even advances the argument that the length of a feature picture should be governed by the story it tells and not by the arbitrary five-reel rule promulgated by somebody and adopted by everybody.

"You might just as well tell a novelist how many words he must write his next story in, or a painter how many brushfuls of paint he must use on his next canvas," declared Mr. Capellani.

LILLIAN WALKER
IN WESTERN STORY
Lillian Walker's latest story is "Hesper of the Mountains," a drama of the west, in which the work of Evert Overton also stands out.

Miss Walker is seen as a luxury loving and cultured miss of the east, who, when forced to go west with her sickly brother, expresses a hearty dislike for the country, its customs, and its rough uncultured men. Raymond, a ranch foreman, loses his encourage him, he goes off to another town to try his hand at prospecting. Chance brings her to the same town, and when in the midst of an uprising of the miners, with his life and property constantly in danger, Raymond remains cool, and finally settles the disturbance, the girls see her estimate of western men was erroneous. When Raymond next calls to plead his suit, his task is an easy one.

BESSIE BARRISCALE
IN KAY-BEE PLAY
Bessie Barriscale, star, is enjoying a brief rest following the completion of the Irish comedy drama in which she was working for the last month. Soon she is to begin as the star of a new feature, the scenes of which are laid in the poetic Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. Monte M. Katterjohn, who wrote the story, declares it is a "fantastic comedy drama," and Miss Barriscale is so pleased with her part that she ventures to predict that it will be another "faggy."

Dorothy Dalton.
This Triangle actress has just become a featured player. Her latest release is "The Jungle Child."

For the first time in the history of Bangor, Me., a motion picture was staged there when Edmund Breeze and Ormi Hawley appeared in the filming of "The Iron Hand." A thrilling log jam explosion in the Penobscot river was the principal scene taken. Others were made at the Bangor municipal waterworks.

AT THE APOLLO MONDAY.

Valentine Grant Makes Fascinating Heroine.
"The Innocent Lie," by Lois Zellner, the latest of the Famous Players-Paramount productions, was directed by Sidney Clcott, on the picturesque island of Bermuda. The exterior scenes are unsurpassedly beautiful and with the spacious interior settings make an elaborate background for this appealing drama appearing at the Apollo next Monday.

Miss Valentine Grant, who has won distinction in several previous photodramas, appears as Nora O'Brien, a poor Irish lass.

Miss Grant plays the role of Nora with remarkable skill and is supported by a notable cast, including Jack J. Clark, Morris Foster, Hunter Arden and Robert Cain. Her debut upon the Famous Players-Paramount screen will undoubtedly be considered an auspicious one.

AT THE APOLLO TUESDAY.

Marie Doro in "The Heart of Nora Flynn."
"Little Billy" Jacobs appears prominently in the support of Marie Doro in "The Heart of Nora Flynn," which will be at the Apollo on Tuesday. Though only five years old, he has the distinction of being a photodramatic star in his own right. Ever since he was two years old he has been receiving a salary that some of the prominent screen stars would envy.

"Little Billy" was especially engaged by Cecil De Mille to appear with Miss Doro. Among theatrical people Billy is recognized as a five year wonder.

Mr. De Mille asserts that he is much easier to direct and requires less instructions to act a scene perfect than many experienced actors.

H. B. Warner in "The Beggar of Cawnpore"
"Thought reflection" is the term which H. B. Warner, who is starred in "The Beggar of Cawnpore," Triangle-Paramount feature, at the Beverly tonight, applies to what he considers the highest art in motion picture acting. In these words, he declares, he has summed up the secret of success on the screen.

"Since joining Mr. Ince's players, I have been impressed with two things," says the actor, "the sincerity of everybody connected with the work and the fact that the mind of the actor can register on the screen more than can his actions."

AT THE BEVERLY SUNDAY

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad Man"
Most of the villains we have had in photoplays from the very beginning of the film industry have been the utter villains of tradition. They have been just on general principals. Douglas Fairbanks, however, has come to the rescue with an innovation in "The Good Bad Man," a Triangle-Paramount feature which he wrote himself, and in which he is starred at the Beverly tomorrow.

The bad man here is a most likable young chap, whose depredations take place in the channels of commerce. For instance, he holds up the Pacific Limited, and robs the conductor of his ticket punch. Again, he holds up the town grocer and robs him of quantities of food which he bestows upon the friendless little orphan who lives on the outskirts of civilization.

The reason is that "Passin' Through" as he calls himself for want of a better name, has idea of who his father was. He suspects that he may have been born illegitimate. Therefore, he is an enemy to society, which would make him an outcast.

In the course of the stirring action of the play, "Passin' Through" learns that his father was honorably married to his mother, and that his parentage was regular in every respect.

Lost and found articles quickly find their owners through the use of the want columns.

As a means of disposing of your real estate, the little want ads are sure winners.

Our patrons say this is the coolest theatre in town.

Mlle. Leitzel, Smallest and Greatest of Woman Aerialists

Here is a picture of the tiniest, yet, feat is technically known as the "half the greatest woman aerialist in circulation." It is but one of many wonderful features of Mlle. Leitzel, and she is a native of France. She weighs less than 100 pounds, wearing a child's shoe and having just passed her eighteenth birthday, she is today able to endure a greater tax upon strength in the performance of the "big top" than most male performers. Hanging by one hand from the end of a rope suspended in mid-air she tosses her lithe body fairly "over her own shoulders" and back again as often as forty consecutive times without pause. This

The bureau will make a canvas of the unemployed, asking each one to state what he must have. The result has been that there is an estimate given out far over the number of men who come from eastern places, sometimes do not get sufficient work to pay for their trip to the state.

"Prester John"

"You've got them here?" he asked sharply and drew a long breath when I whipped the little book out of my pocket.

I said nothing of the contents. Then I described my meeting with Sir Harry and the speeches at the hall. At that he laughed uproariously.

"Harry talked dished nonsense, did he? I quite believe it. He's as good a chap as ever breathed, but his idiot of an uncle has stuffed his head with maggots. Go on, Mr. Hannay."

My day as road man excited him a bit. He made me describe the two fellows in the car very closely and seemed to be raking back in his memory. He grew merry again when he heard of the fate of that fool, Laurence Brown.

But the old man in the moorland house solemnized him. Again I had to describe every detail of his appearance.

"Bland and baldheaded and hooded his eyes like a bird. He sounds a sinister wild fowl. And you dynamited his hermitage after he had saved you from the police? Spirited piece of work that."

Presently I reached the end of my wanderings. He got up slowly and looked down at me from the hearth rug.

"You may dismiss the police from your mind," he said. "You're in no danger from the law of this land."

"Great Scott!" I cried. "Have they got the murderer?"

"No. But for the last fortnight they have dropped you from the list of possibilities."

"Why?" I asked in amazement.

"Principally because I received a letter from Scudler. I knew something of the man, and he did several jobs for me. He was half crank, half genius, but he was wholly honest. The trouble about him was his partiality for playing a lone hand. That made him pretty well useless in any secret service—a pity, for he had uncommon gifts. I think he was the bravest man in this world, for he was always shivering with fright, and yet nothing would choke him off. I had a letter from him on the 31st of May."

"But he had been dead a week by then."

"The letter was written and posted on the 23d. He evidently did not anticipate an immediate decease. His communications usually took a week to reach me, for they were sent under cover to Spain and then to Newcastle. He had a mania, you know, for concealing his tracks."

"What did he say?" I stammered.

"Nothing. Merely that he was in danger, but had found shelter with a good friend, and that I would hear from him before the 15th of June. He gave me no address, but said he was living near Portland place. I think his object was to clear up if anything happened. When I got it I went to Scotland Yard, went over the details of the inquest and concluded that you were the friend. We made inquiries about you, Mr. Hannay, and found you were respectable. I thought I knew the motives for your disappearance—not only the police, the other one, too—and when I got Harry's scrawl I guessed at the rest. I have been expecting you any time this past week."

You can imagine what a load this took off my mind. I felt a free man once more, for I was now up against my country's enemies only and not my country's law.

"Now let us have 'the little notebook,'" said Sir Walter.

It took us a good hour to work through it. I explained the cipher, and he was jolly quick at picking it up.

He corrected my reading of it on several points, but I had been fairly right on the whole. His face was very grave before he had finished, and he sat silent for awhile.

"I don't know what to make of it," he said at last. "He is right about one thing—what is going to happen the day after tomorrow. How the devil can it have got known? That is ugly enough in itself. But all this about war and the Black Stone—it reads like some wild melodrama. If only I had more confidence in Scudler's judgment!"

The trouble about him was that he was too romantic. He had the artistic temperament and wanted a story to be better than God meant it to be. He had a lot of odd biases too. Jews, for example, made him see red. Jews and the high finance."

"The Black Stone," he repeated, "Der Solwager Stein." It's like a penny novel. And all this stuff about Karolides—that is the weak part of the tale, for I happen to know that the virtuous Karolides is likely to outlast us both. There is no state in Europe that wants him gone. Besides, he has just been playing up to Berlin and Vienna and giving my chief some uneasy moments. No; Scudler has gone off the track there. Frankly, Hannay, I don't believe that part of his story."

"There's some nasty business afoot, and he found out too much and lost his life over it."

"But I am ready to take my oath that it is ordinary spy work. A certain great European power makes a hobby of her spy system, and her methods are not too particular. Since she pays by piecework her blackguards are not likely to stick at a murder or two. They want our naval dispositions for their collection at the Marlinnet, but they will be pigeon-holed, nothing more."

Just then the butler entered the room.

"There's a trunk call from London, Sir Walter. It's Mr. Bath, and he wants to speak to you personally."

My host went off to the telephone.

He returned in five minutes with a white face. "I apologize to the shade of Scudler," he said. "Karolides was shot dead this evening at a few minutes after 7."

I came down to breakfast next morning, after eight hours of blessed sleep, to find Sir Walter decoding a telegram in the midst of muffins and marmalade. His fresh rosinness of yesterday seemed a thought tarnished.

"I had a busy hour on the telephone after you went to bed," he said. "I got my chief to speak to the first lord and the secretary for war, and they are bringing Royce over a day sooner. This wire clinches it. He will be in London at 5. Odd that the code word for a sous-chef d'état major general should be 'Porker.'"

He directed me to the hot dishes and went on.

"Not that I think it will do much good. If your friends were clever enough to find out the first arrangement they are clever enough to discover the change. I would give my head to know where the leak is. We believed there were only five men in England who knew about Royce's visit, and you may be certain they were fewer in France, for they manage these things better there."

While I ate he continued to talk, making me, to my surprise, a present of his full confidence.

"Can the dispositions not be changed?" I asked.

"They could," he said. "But we want to avoid that if possible. They are the result of immense thought, and no alteration would be as good. Besides, on one or two points change is simply impossible. Still, something could be done if it were absolutely necessary. But you see the difficulty, Hannay."

"Our enemies are not going to be such fools as to pick Royce's pocket or any childish game like that. They know that would mean a row and put us on our guard. Their aim is to get the details without any of us knowing so that Royce will go back to Paris in the belief that the whole business is still deadly secret. If they can't do that they fail, for once we suspect they know that the whole thing must be altered."

"Then we must stick by the Frenchman's side, till he is home again," I said.

"I thought I knew the motives for your disappearance—not only the police, the other one, too—and when I got Harry's scrawl I guessed at the rest. I have been expecting you any time this past week."

"Royer dines with my chief and then comes to my house, where four people will see him—Whittaker from the admiralty, myself, Sir Arthur Drew and General Winstanley. The first lord is ill and has gone to Sheringham. At my house he will get a certain document from Whittaker, and after that he will be motorized to Portsmouth, where a destroyer will take him to Havre."

"His journey is too important for the ordinary boat train. He will never be left unprotected for a moment till he is safe on French soil. The same with Whittaker till he meets Royce. That is the best we can do, and it's hard to see how there can be any miscarriage. But I don't mind admitting that I'm horribly nervous. This murder of Karolides will play the devil in the chancelleries of Europe."

CHAPTER XII.
At Scotland Yard.

AFTER breakfast he asked me if I could drive a car.

"Well, you'll be my chauffeur today and wear Hudson's rig. You're about his size. You have a hand in this business and we are taking no risks. There are desperate men against us who will not respect the country retreat of an overworked official."

"If they thought they could get the information in Paris they would try there. It means that they have some deep scheme on foot in London which they reckon is going to win out."

"Well, you'll be my chauffeur today and wear Hudson's rig. You're about his size. You have a hand in this business and we are taking no risks. There are desperate men against us who will not respect the country retreat of an overworked official."

When I first came to London I had bought a car and amused myself with running about the south of England, so I knew something of the geography.

I took Sir Walter to town by the Bath road and made good going. It was a soft, breathless June morning, with a promise of sultriness later, but it was delicious enough swinging through the little towns with their freshly watered streets and past the summer gardens of the Thames valley.

I landed Sir Walter at his house in Queen Anne's gate punctually by halfpast 11. The butler was coming up by train with the luggage.

The first thing he did was to take me round to Scotland Yard. There we saw a plain gentleman, with a clean shaven lawyer's face.

"I've brought you the Portland place murderer," was Sir Walter's introduction.

The reply was a wry smile. "It would have been a welcome present. Bullivant. This, I presume, is Mr. Richard Hannay, who for some days greatly interested my department."

"Mr. Hannay will interest it again. He has much to tell you, but not today. For certain grave reasons his talk must wait for twenty-four hours. Then, I can promise you, you will be entertained and possibly edified. I want you to assure Mr. Hannay that he will suffer no further inconvenience."

This assurance was promptly given. "You can take up your life where you left off," I was told. "Your flat, which probably you no longer wish to occupy, is waiting for you, and your man is still there. As you were never publicly accused, we considered that there was no need of a public exculpation. But on that, of course, you must please yourself."

"We may want your assistance later on, MacGillivray," Sir Walter said as we left.

Then he turned me loose.

"Come and see me tomorrow, Hannay. I needn't tell you to keep deadly quiet. If I were you I would go to bed, for you must have considerable arrears of sleep to overcome. You had better lie low, for if one of your Black Stone friends saw you there might be trouble."

"It would have been a welcome present. Bullivant. This, I presume, is Mr. Richard Hannay, who for some days greatly interested my department."

I felt curiously at a loose end. At first it was very pleasant to be a free man, able to go where I wanted without fearing anything. I had only been a month under the ban of the law and it was quite enough for me.

I went to the Savoy and ordered very carefully a very good luncheon and then smoked the best cigar the house could provide. But I was still feeling nervous. When I saw anybody look at me in the lounge I grew shy and wondered if they were thinking about the murder.

After that I took a taxi and drove miles away up into North London.

I walked back through fields and lanes of villas and terraces and then shins and mean streets, and it took me pretty nearly two hours. All the while my restlessness was growing worse. I felt that great things, tremendous things, were happening or about to happen, and I, who was the coward of the whole business, was out of it.

Royer would be landing at Dover. Sir Walter would be making plans with the few people in England who were in the secret, and somewhere in the darkness the Black Stone would be working.

I felt the sense of danger and impending calamity, and I had the curious feeling, too, that I alone could avert it, alone could grapple with it. But I was out of the game now. How could it be otherwise? It was not likely that cabinet ministers and admiralty lords and generals would admit me to their councils.

I actually began to wish that I could run up against one of my three enemies. That would lead to developments. I felt that I wanted enormously to have a vulgar scrap with those gentry, where I could hit out and flatten something. I was rapidly getting into a very bad temper.

I didn't feel like going back to my flat. That had to be faced some time, but as I still had sufficient money I thought I would put it off till next day and go to a hotel for the night.

My irritation lasted through dinner, which I had at a restaurant in Jermyn street. I was no longer hungry and I drank several courses pass untouched. I drank the best part of a bottle of Burgundy, but it did nothing to cheer me. An abominable restlessness had taken possession of me.

PAPA, MAY I HAVE A SUBWAY?

WELL SEE

NEW YORK CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM

NEW YORK SUBWAYS

New York will soon be as bare as a desert. Gradually they are getting it underground. About all that is left on top is the skyscrapers, and as soon as someone contrives an underground skyscraper, New York can crawl into its hole and never come out. New York can then be called the Mammoth Cave of Manhattan.

Years hence, the citizens will all have become blind like the blind fish of the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky. That which is not used, dies. Then New Yorkers will be supremely happy. They despise daylight. They breathe normally in subways, and are suffocated by fresh air.

Even now a New Yorker hardly knows how to act on the surface. He comes up to earth with reluctance and it is all he can do to wait until he gets back into a tube or tunnel. Now and then, in a morbid moment, a sensitive soul may imagine that he sees the face of the typical New Yorker evolving into the cold, sharp countenance of a rat or some brother burrower.

The day in New York is punctuated with underground explosions. It is the great battle of Manhattan Island—Upper Manhattan taking Underground Manhattan for its own—the battle of mind over matter—man returning to the earth out of which he rose—a city besieging its own cellar.

Once they have tucked the city entirely into tubes and tunnels, once operas, garages, roof gardens and all have been established underground, the island can grow green and there will be room for one vast cemetery where tenement and sweat-shop now stand. Surely they will not take their cemeteries underground!

Thank goodness for Bloomfield, Indiana, and Emporia, Kansas, and Peoria, Illinois, and all other good towns that are still on the level.

Why A Whale Spouts. Sonny loved natural history, and consequently was all attention when teacher explained about the whale and the many uses its parts were put to. When she had finished up went Sonny's hand and much to teacher's surprise: "Say, teacher, when a whale spouts, does he do it to bale himself out?"

Not a Biblical Term. The terms "major and minor prophecies" do not occur in the Bible but have been used for convenience in classifying them. According to this classification the major prophecies are those of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, and the minor ones are Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah and Malachi. The distinction between major and minor relates to the size of the books.

Tomorrow. Do not let the shadow of tomorrow's disagreeable duty fall over the brightness that belongs to today. Do not double the shadow by forecast, and especially do not throw it over others. Leave the hour in the day where it belongs.

HOMES OF CHARACTER

"If a man makes money the pinnacle of his success in his daily work he ought to figure on solid comfort during his evenings and nights"—says the Old Philosopher.

A Spring Bed is the most important factor in your comfort and welfare.

If you cheat nature in the amount or quality of your sleep you will pay for it in lagged-out days and shortened years.

Do you get out of bed feeling young and with stored up vitality or do you feel sleepy and half rested? If so, before going to a doctor, examine your Bed and come to us about our springs.

A Brick and Cement House—By John Henry Newson

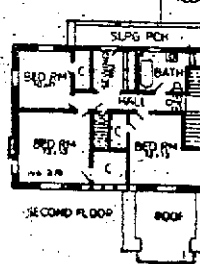

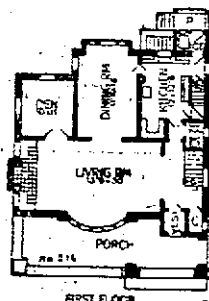

HOME OF CHARACTER NO. 216.

This house is designed on simple lines and relies entirely upon the location and size of openings as well as the combination of materials for this quaint effect. The brick used upon the exterior from the grade line to the sills of the second floor windows is a rough face brick of various shades and colors and the plaster on the second floor and in the gables is on hollow tile, and a light cream in color. The open terrace across the front allows for ample light into the living room and the circular bay presents a very charming view from the exterior, and a beautiful vista in looking through from the dining room toward the front of the house.

The house is entered by means of a covered porch at the doorway, through a vestibule, into a stair hall. The living room extends from this hall to the opposite wall, and is terminated with a fireplace and seats forming an angle-nook across the end. The dining room opens off the center of the living room and extends to the rear, and the second floor is reached both from the front stair hall and from the kitchen. The cellar is accessible from the kitchen and also from the outside cellarway at the rear of the house. The first floor is also provided with a den or library off of the living room with glass doors in the opening. The second floor has three bedrooms, each with ample closets, and a sewing room, which opens up onto a sleeping porch on the rear. The bathroom, which is over the kitchen is very large and has in it a towel closet, a feature which is very convenient.

Under average building conditions this house, 36x32 feet, can be built for about $7000, using a good grade of material and workmanship.

By special arrangement all inquiries from Gazette readers concerning No. 216 or any other HOME OF CHARACTER appearing in The Gazette from week to week will be answered without charge by Mr. Newson if addressed, "John Henry Newson, HOMES OF CHARACTER DEPT., The Gazette." In writing always give the number of the house concerning which you make inquiry.
